FEDLINK Summit on the Digital Public Library of America (DPLA)

Wednesday June 19, 2013, 9:00 a.m. - 12:30 p.m.

Join your colleagues for a free half-day symposium to learn about and shape federal library participation in the Digital Public Library of America (DPLA) initiative. The DPLA describes itself as “leading the first concrete steps toward the realization of a large-scale digital public library that will make the cultural and scientific record available to all.”

For federal libraries, the DPLA represents an extraordinary opportunity to make their unique collections available among the DPLA’s vast collections of public domain materials. The symposium will feature speakers from DPLA, a panel of federal libraries already exploring options for participation, and a technical panel from the Government Printing Office on using the FDSys solution as a means to bring collections to light despite IT constraints. Question and answer sessions will help the federal information community discover ways to participate in this initiative.

Guest speakers will be Maura Marx, Deputy Director, Office of Library Services, Institute of Museum and Library Services (IMLS) and Dan Cohen, Founding Executive Director, DPLA.

FEDLINK Orientation to Federal Libraries and Information Centers Series: The National Institutes of Health Library

Thursday, June 20, 2013, 10:00 a.m. - 12:20 p.m.

The National Institutes of Health (NIH) Library is the focal point for the exchange of biomedical and scientific information vital to the support of the research activities conducted at the National Institutes of Health. The library also provides information services and resources to several other agencies within the Department of Health & Human Services. The tour will include a look at the history of the NIH Library (including the effects of the 2007 flood and the Library’s renovation), an examination of the duties of an NIH Informationist, an instruction program, a technology sandbox seminar, a bioinformatics discussion, and a look at NIH’s “Going Green” initiative, all in addition to a tour of the Library and the Green Terrace.
